

Noah Deich

Deputy Assistant Secretary - Office of Carbon Management

U.S. DOE - Office of Fossil Energy & Carbon Management

Biography:

Noah is the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Carbon Management for the U.S. Department of Energy's Office of Fossil Energy and Carbon Management. Noah came to FECM from Carbon180, which he co-founded to catalyze the development of a portfolio of carbon removal solutions. Prior to that, Noah was an economic and management consultant with Accenture and ICF international, where he gained experience in many fields including environmental market and carbon offset modeling and renewable and fossil energy power plants valuations. Noah received his MBA from the Haas School of Business at UC Berkeley and his BA from the University of Virginia.